‘To boldly go where no one has gone before’ – Star Trek, TNG

We are entering a strange new world. Things that were common in the past are different today. Gone are the handshakes, hugs, coffee clubs, and get togethers. Now we have signs advising us how to stay safe, masks that hide our smiles, and arrows that give us direction. Has anyone else found they were going the wrong direction in an aisle? I admit it has happened to me a few times. Remember to be kind to each other as we are all learning to navigate in this new world.

We need to adapt, be flexible, and stay informed.

An effective way to interact with others without spreading the virus is to use the Vulcan greeting ‘live long and prosper’ – thank you Mr. Spock.

Steady as she goes, Mr. Sulu.
